I'm having to rehome my sons Doberman as he is going in the army and with me working full time I can't look after him and give him the daily exercise he needs. He is massive for a pup and is full of energy. He is fully house trained and sleeps in a crate at night. He is great with other dogs as I have a chihuahua and a Pomeranian. He is fully intact and has a fantastic pedigree. He comes with everything you need and his 5 generation Kc pedigree papers. Only people who have had a big, strong dog before as he is VERY strong and I can't take him for a walk as he pulls so much. He's great off the lead though as he's been my running partner down the lanes where we live. I am absolutely gutted to be rehoming him but he needs a home where he will gets loads of exercise and a companion that will love him for the big daft dope he is but also give him the training and structure he needs. He is very clever and obeys all commands (when he wants) and with a firm owner he will be an amazing companion. He loves cuddles as you can see in one of the photos. The Last photo is him as a
