Historically in Cheshire, it is on the Wirral Peninsula, along the west bank of the River Mersey. Opposite the city of Liverpool. Birkenhead is best known as a centre for ship building, as a seaport and its related industries. Birkenhead Park is acknowledged to be the first publicly funded park in Britain. The park was the forerunner of the Parks Movement and its influence was far reaching both in Britain and abroad – most notably on Frederick Law Olmstead’s design for Central Park.
