Here we have my partners kia rio, i bought it for her back in September to try and teach her to drive, being a 1.3 its cheap to run/insure and given that its an automatic its easy to drive. However she has only used it a few times and doesn't like driving so I'm putting it up for sale, also handy as i want to buy my house so am selling my "pride and joy" as well! Now then when i bought the car it was in extremely poor condition, the wheel bearing was knackered, the brakes where rubbing making horrible noises, the battery was completely dead had to jump start it every time, the rear seat was damaged and un-useable, the whole car was covered in green and black mould on the outside, and the fuel gauge didn't work. I have fixed all of the above myself with the exception of the fuel gauge, i was un-aware of any of this on previous sellers advert! Not sure on why it doesn't work but we haven't run out of fuel since filling it up when I bought it and finding out gauge didn't work!

Car starts runs drives stops all as it should with no funny noises, cambelt was replaced at 55k miles and the car is only on 81k now. The mot was 80k and is due again on 1st july 2016. Due to the new law tax is none transferable,

The car has central locking, electric windows, electric mirrors, cd player, good speakers, think thats everything i know about the car, call or txt welcome, i may be busy but will try get back to you asap.
