Canon IJ printer driver, or for that matter driver of any printer, is nothing but a supporting application software for a particular hardware. Each and every hardware device requires supporting software in order to execute. Therefore, the driver acts as software to the printer and instructs the printer to operate based on user actions in the system to which the printer is linked. Hence, it acts as an interface between the system (i.e. the user) and the printer. Owing to its importance, the first and foremost step of installing a printer to a device is to first install the printer without which the system or device would not detect the printer.
