Typical Honda and a doddle to ride fast or slow: it's relatively light and flickable, just keep going & you'll enjoy it more and more. The low centre of gravity and centralised mass mean that it never feels anything less than glued to the road, and combined with the firm suspension and positive front end it's a very well balanced bike and very much at home in the city or on the open road. The Honda never seems to lack grunt, it's likable and incredibly easy to get on with from the off because of the way it pulls cleanly and strongly thanks largely to its long stroke. Paint is impressively thick and all fittings and panels fit extremely well. If there was ever a bike for tough economic times, it would be the NC700 for commuting it's a no-brainer. Honda's excellent Combined Anti-Lock Braking system (C-ABS) comes as standard and you get a nice big storage space where the tank should be which can easily swallow a full face helmet.
