- Seriously slim case makes this the lightest and most portable MacBook ever
- A single USB-C port combines device input, power and video output for simple connectivity
- The New Force Touch trackpad makes navigation faster and more intuitive than ever
- Fanless design and nine hour battery life let you work all day without being disturbed
- AC WiFi gives you faster, more stable internet connectivity so you can make the most of Cloud computing

Comprehensive computing wherever you are

At just 13.1 mm thick and weighing a mere 900 grams, the Apple MacBook is made for computing on the move. You can drop it into a bag or case and enjoy access to everything that matters without compromising luggage space.

The nine hour battery life means you can work all day between charging. If you do need to top up, simply connect a USB-C cable to the MacBook. USB-C is the next-generation of PC connectivity, and allows you to connect monitors, external storage, headphones and more.

Cloud storage is fast, easy, integrated, so you can forget about local memory limits and carry on working. Storage with iCloud can share documents between your Apple devices and enjoy the peace of mind that comes with automatic backup and access to important documents from anywhere.

Force Touch Trackpad

The MacBook 12 features Apple's new Force Touch trackpad. Rather than a normal 'click', it vibrates to let you know a click has been registered. You click anywhere on the pad, so you aren't confined to using buttons at the bottom like most trackpads.

You get different results depending on how hard you press, so you can activate double and left clicks simply by pressing slightly harder.

All the normal Apple gestures are still present, so you can move between software, pages and applications with simple finger movements.

Intel® Core™ M processing

One of the reasons the new MacBook manages to be so slim is the Intel® Core™ M processor. It's much more compact than other processors and doesn't need fan cooling, so there are no noisy and unsightly vents to affect the size and shape of the all-aluminium body. It's quick too, and is the ideal processor for everyday work, surfing and fun.

Packed full of performance and high-end features including a better-than-HD screen and super fast SSD storage, the new MacBook is the ultimate Apple laptop for computing on-the-go. Colour Space grey Box contents - Apple Macbook
