Tao Kung

is a system of movements originating from the martial art of PGB White Crane Silat for people who have experienced health problems & older adults who wish to improve and/or maintain their health. It includes gentle exercises/warm up's, gentle forms inspired by nature & breathing movements that will improve your health, reduce anxiety & stress. Persatuan Gerak Badan (PGB) is a school of Silat, (martial art,) founded by Suhu Subur Rahardja in 1952. in Bogor, West Java, Indonesia.

The White Crane (Bangau Putih) is its emblem. His son the current Grand Master Gunawan Rahardja inherited the school 1986. The school is admired for its dynamic, powerful and graceful style, with students all over the world. In 2000, Guru Gunawan Rahardja developed a series of simple movements to improve health in older adults or for the practice of adults who experience or are recovering from ill health. He named this system of movements Tao Kung, translated Tao Kung means 'motion for harmony'. The gentle movements give powerful results. practicing Tao Kung enables the body to heal, harmonize and balance in mind, body & spirit. Tao Kung is enjoyable, no strain or force is used, movements are practiced in line with each person's individual ability and scope. The movements are done slowly and with attention to the posture of the body. Practitioners develop their awareness of their body. This enables them to improve their strength, flexibility and energy. They also learn to keep relaxed and in harmony with nature. The benefits of the practice include: increasing the strength of the bones and immune system, balancing of the body's systems including the respiratory, nervous, hormonal, lymphatic system's.

Harmony of the internal organs. Increase vitality, stamina and renewal. The promotion of Chi or life force. Wellbeing and reduced anxiety and stress.
