Like Transit, the most popular version is a panel van, Vivaro is modern-looking inside, comfortable and very practical. There's room enough in the cab for three without feeling cramped. The dash-mounted gearstick is easy to use and frees up floor space, allowing the driver to leave the van via the passenger door if needed. Big door bins take care of odds and ends and are large enough for large bottles. There are a number of shelves for paperwork and odds and ends. The dashboard is hooded, so that any items placed in the fascia cubbies do not cause irritating reflections in the windscreen. The driving position is adaptable, with a height-adjustable driver's and a height and reach-adjustable steering wheel. Modern CDTi diesel engines are offered across the range. These are refined, smooth and more than capable of hauling Vivaro's bulk. On the road, Vivaro is an excellent performer. It's easy to drive, with good steering and sharp brakes.
