We only buy Mini's in when they're a real catch, have loads of extras with very little mileage and a good history, and this one is no exception. Ours has been serviced three times in the time since it was registered brand new in September 2012, the most recent of those having been in own workshop at the current mileage meaning that you won't have to worry about it for another year or 12,000 miles! The Countryman is not nearly as small as the likes of the Cooper, and is the MINI for those of you that still want to be able to fit the golf clubs or weekly shop into the boot. Having said that, it feels genuinely comfortable to drive for both the driver and their passengers, whilst it retains all of the characteristics you would normally expect of BMW engineering, the Dynamic Stability Control keeping you steady on the road and an array of other features keeping you entertained for the years to come. MINI's are one of the most customisable cars on the market from new, and so to see that this one came with just under £3,000 of extras gives you an idea of quite the extent the original owner must have loved this and looked after it, probably part of the reason for which it's still in such a good condition today.
