The beginning of April my 13 year old son was diagnosed with nodular lymphocyte predominant Hodgkin's lymphoma after having a lump removed from the side of his face. Haidens prognosis is very good but all the same he will have to endure a small course of chemo. Haiden has thick Black shoulder length hair which he likes to hide behind. He won't even have a trim. When he was diagnosed my first thought before any other was "What if he loses his hair?" For children of all ages and especially teenagers image is everything, it's the first impression you give to others. The thought of him losing his hair was very upsetting.

So, what can I do at this difficult time to show Haiden that hair isn't all that important? I know! I'll shave all 28inches of my think long hair off. I will donate my hair to the Little Princess Trust so that other children can benefit from my shave and have real hair wigs made for them when going through something that internally is so intense.

I then needed to raise funds as the wigs cost the charity between £350 and £500 to then purchase the finished wig to be gifted to a child.

I started my just giving page with an original target of £200. With the help of social media we hit £1000 by the end of the first week. With just over 1 week to go we are at £2620 on my page and we have received so many kind donations towards our raffle. The local community have been amazing and a lot of schools and nursery have agreed to hold a messy hair day or non uniform day for a small donation on the day I do the shave.

The shave takes place on Friday 1st July at The Pride Of The Peaks pub in new mills from 5pm onwards. We have face painting, balloon modelling, a bouncy castle, and a fantastic raffle.

HaaldenU39s hair raise

45-Z

Haideen has his first course of chemo on Tuesday 28th June. Nothing more could encourage me to do the surgery than my gorgeous little boy. His attitude is so admirable and his love for me.

And, because generosity and kindness was completely blown by the way.

I keep being told what a good thing I'm doing, and in all honesty, and everyone else that's raising the money and donating part of the raise to my determination of the gemma and the fact that have a very their spare time emailing company's, traipsing round the shops and calling people from all over to get some fantastic prizes. This has raised us hundreds of pounds so far.

Haidee will be ok!

He is strong and has a really good attitude towards the whole thing, we hope you can join us and help us to make lots of money for this charity! Visit www.justgiving.com/fundraising/amie
