Synopsis:

"I am what you forced me to become!" snarls Mordred

King Arthur has ruled Dumnonia, the South-west peninsula of Britain, after being chosen as the Pendragon, after his defeat of the Saxon sea-wolves, at the Battle of Badon Hill, at the age of sixteen. His elder sister, once the Arch-druidess of Dumnonia; Morgan, consumed with jealousy, plots against the Throne, and is banished from Dumnonia after the deaths of Arthurs first wife Anna, and his baby son. Many years later, a young nobleman is found, poisoned, on the moors. Brought to the fort town Isca, by Arthur's warriors, he is revealed to be Mordred, illegitimate son of King Arthur and also the victim of plots by his father and Sir Lancelot to control the throne and the kingdom. He eventually kills Lancelot, who is the last of Arthur's knights chosen by the sword of Durandale. Arthur battles the Second Sarmatian Invasion, not in his usual enemies, and in the battle is gritty, dark, bloody, and violent. As a fan of the original stage production, I was disappointed that the film didn't do justice to the story. The film is a good introduction to the story, but it's not as good as the stage production. The film is a good introduction to the story, but it's not as good as the stage production.
