I have a number of potted young trees ready for planting out in sunny positions. They tolerate poor but well drained soil, dry conditions etc, and can tolerate maritime exposure. Read up on them on Google, and make sure they are for you before contacting. Male trees are trouble-free almost ;-), but the female tree grows a large fruit that looks like a human brain. These are not really suitable for pedestrian areas, as they can come down from high at some speed. No. I don't know whether these trees are male or female, as they haven't developed yet! £5 each. 5 for £.
