'You may mistake yourself for playing an acoustic grand piano thanks to the careful, lavish samples. The keyboard responds impressively, even as you play quick repeated figures. This helps preserve every expressive nuance that the performer creates. There are three selectable touch curves on the key touch control, meaning you can get the perfect touch sensitivity for every playing style or type of song.' - www.gear4music.com

'The keys of the Korg SP-250 play just like a real acoustic piano. This particular piano features Korg's state-of-the-art mechanism for piano keys, called RH3. RH3 stands for Real Weighted Hammer Action 3, so it's their tried and tested third generation of hammer action technology, and is now featured in all of their high-end pianos. To put it frankly, the feel of RH3 is simply amazing. As soon as you put your fingers to the keys you just might forget you're playing a digital piano and not a real acoustic. Each key is weighted perfectly, and the piano grades along the length of the piano, from bass to treble, with keys being heavier at the bass, and lighter at the treble. If that isn't paying attention to precision, then I don't know what is.' - www.digitalpianoreviewguide.com
