Elba Island is 224 square kms and is situated only 10 kms from the coastal town of Piombino, the third largest Italian island after Sicily and Sardinia and the largest in the Tuscan Archipelago. It has recently become part of the Tuscan Archipelago's National Park together with the islands of Pianosa, Capraia, Montecristo, Giglio and Giannutri.

The Island is divided into 8 municipalities (Portoferraio, Campo nell'Elba, Capoliveri, Marciana, Marciana Marina, Porto Azzurro, Rio Marina e Rio nell'Elba) with a total population of about 30.000 inhabitants, which increases considerably during the summer.

Marciana Marina is one of the most important towns of the island and is situated at sea level, with nearly 2.000 inhabitants. The climate is warm and temperate with an average annual temperature of around 16.2 °C.

There is a small marina called Circolo della Vela and three main beaches, Il Moleto that is to be found along the seafront center, while La Fenicia and La Fenicetta are near The Medicea Tower that was built to protect the town in the sixteenth century from frequent pirate invasion.
