Advantages of Double Glazing WindowsIncreased home securityGreatly diminished heat energy loss and minimisation of draughtsVariety of glass options from self cleaning to anti-sunVirtually maintenance freeReduction of carbon footprint due to increased energy efficiencyNoticeable reduction of external noise If you are considering improving your home there are an array of options available to you, but typically, the first that most people consider is to change their WINDOWS. With good reason, new double glazing comes with guarantees for the quality and lifetime of the work and in a wide range of colours frame choices, window finishes and types of opening. DOUBLE GLAZING has the main benefit of improving the insulation of your home, sometimes by as much as 40%. If you have double glazing already, innovations in the industry means we can still see an improvement in your insulation and heat retention by upgrading your double glazing. Changing your windows can also increase the safety and security of your home, with new windows matched with the latest in locks and multipoint systems designed to keep your home safe, year on year. New technology also means that window frames are now offered in a wider range of colours and finishes, meaning that double glazing can be fitted to homes of any age and style to without taking anything away from the style and elegance of an existing house design or period.
