BLADE LEVINSON RH-4 Standard with Blade case in See Thru Red. SR No 127808.

This guitar has not been gigged - it's too pristine to do that and has spent it's life either as a wall adornment or in its case. Blade Levinson, Switzerland have confirmed that this guitar is an RH-4 Standard (RS-4) which was made in 2001 in Japan, as all other RH-4's. The RH4 standard model is similar to the RH4 classic guitar except for the Fretboard (rosewood), the tremolo is a Blade FT-2 and the neck has natural amber finish. This is what the Blade website says about the Classic model :- The original Blade – a modern classic since 1987. This exquisite instrument is immediately recognizable by the sepia colored mirror pickguard and superb see thru red finish. The noiseless V-3 single coils give you great tone and punch – but without the hum. The LH-55 is the Levinson classic humbucker for warmth and fatness, while not loosing high end clarity. The Variable Spectrum Control Tone Enhancement allows you enormous tonal variation: jazz, blues, rock country - it's all there. You will not want to put it down.

Tapered Neck Joint

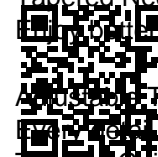

This guitar has access to the neck register via the tapered neck joint for more power and speed.

Adjustable Tension Control

A feature of a Blade guitar represents a commitment to engineering perfection. Adjusted Tension Guide (ATG) perfectly balances the string tension at the nut with asymmetric a spring loaded height adjustment to keep you in tune, no matter how hard you want on your whammy bar.

Falcon Tremolo

This patented tremolo looks, feels and sounds like a vintage style unit but incorporates a patented double block system that also allows upstems while sitting flat on the guitar body. Unlike floating tremolos, the Falcon tremolo lets all of the tone the strings and wood have to offer to the biggest sound possible. The Falcon Tremolo enhances attack and sustain AND stays in tune even if a string is broken - a feature that floating tremos cannot do. Even deep bends against open strings are possible - the open strings do not detune. Now that's style.

Push-Push Humbucker Split

No need to grab anything to split your humbucker. Simply tap the tone pot and you're done. Easy and reliable.
