1982 Yamaha XS750 shaft drive unique one off single seat project bike. Been sitting in my garage waiting for me to complete it for around 5 years and now need the space. No longer runs but was running when I was last working on it a few years ago. The bike has had lots of the hard work done with some new parts and the paint on various parts redone. It will now need at least a new battery, carbs cleaned out, starter motor seal (was leaking when last running), seat will need to be modified to fit or a new one made up. The bike comes with a V5 registration document although it's not in my name (I've never had the bike on the road). I've done a text check on the bike and nothing comes up - I will of course give a full receipt upon purchase. It was originally an Ebay purchase and was put aside due to me building a new business so I've decided to move it on to make space. The bike benefits from a single seat conversion (requires finishing but easy enough to reverse if required), high level exhaust, braided brake lines front and rear. Its' engine is not seized and nor are its brakes. The engine seems to have good compression. I seem to remember rebuilding the brake calipers and front forks plus fitting a new front tyre. Everything was working (lights etc) when laid up. Any questions please ask as I dont bite but no daft tyre kickers as I really dont have the time - it's not being sold as a runner nor is it priced like one. It's a project for someone that likes working on old bikes. If thats you then this could be up your street, if not then look elsewhere for a!
