Salvage operators Sean Muijpurphy and Maureen Epps think they may have struck the mother lode when they discover evidence of an abandoned cruise liner floating freely in the Bering Strait. They waste no time in tracking the ship down and can't believe their luck when they discover numerous gold bars on board. However, they also recognise the need to work quickly as a rip in the ship's hull indicates that it might soon sink and be lost forever. Yet as the crew sets to work and explore the ship further, they start to encounter ghostly phenomena and one by one the individual members begin turning up.
