Border Collie cross Lurcher puppies.
5 bitches and 1 dog left.

They're a mix of black and white, Tri, and one bitch is brown and white.

We're not sure if they're going to be smooth coated yet as they're too young at the moment to tell.

Dad's got papers showing his ISDS breeding which can be seen, we just haven't got round to registering him as he's more of a pet.

Mum is Half Saluki, 3/8ths Greyhound, and 1/8th Whippet.

They're both family pets and good with children, dad needs a lot of exercise (over an hour a day plus having the garden to play in).

Mum not so much but she does like to run, she used to come to work with me, I'd be doing 25mph on a tractor and she'd overtake me with ease. I've never seen her properly run...

Dad is intelligent, he knows which way doors open and will open them, understands a LOT of commands and phrases, remembers words associated with certain walks, can take himself home if we're 3 miles or further from the house.

Mum runs, a LOT! I know I've mentioned this but I need to make it clear that chasing these pups would be idiotic and pointless, you won't be able to catch them or force them to do what you want, you'll need to make them want to listen and please you. The Saluki and Collie in them makes them incredibly independent and intelligent.

Having said that both parents love attention, learning new tricks and words, and enjoy knowing they've done well.

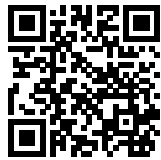

They're all incredibly active and are already eating and drinking, all their eyes are open, and they're interested in our faces and cars. They're going to be born with fleas and ticks and mites, so before they're born we'll give them a good dose of flea and tick treatment. We're happy to have the puppies, but we don't want to have them in the house for the first few weeks.

They'll all come with food and we'll always answer any questions you might have. You're also welcome to come and see them as often as you'd like and meet mum and dad. We're asking for a £50 deposit to hold the puppy with the remainder paid on collection. Ready to leave on the 18th.
